

Using a Protractor to Measure an Angle

A protractor is an instrument used to measure the degree of an angle (acute, right, or obtuse). It is also graduated in degrees.

Place the center point of the base line at the point where the angle intersects. Read the degree of the angle at the point where the north line of angle touches the compass.

